ADEPT

The Association of Directors of Environment, Economy, Planning & Transport

ADEPT is the voice of Place Directors in county and unitary local authorities.

As place-making strategists and policy shapers we design services for the future, making the decisions that shape both our economy and environment.

We are in a unique position, operating between national and local government and Local Enterprise Partnerships. ADEPT works closely with Whitehall and Westminster and alongside our many trusted partners across the private and public sectors.

ADEPT is a forward-thinking organisation, supporting transformation and innovation. We work closely with Corporate Partners at all levels to develop the policies and initiatives we take to Government.

With the devolution of powers to local government as well as a changing relationship with the EU, it's never been more important to have strong partnerships.

We invite you to work with us as members and help shape the future.

'Our Corporate Partners perform a hugely important role in supporting ADEPT, sharing expertise and helping to foster the partnerships and networks that are at the heart of our activities. By joining ADEPT you will become part of a dynamic, growing organisation and will help strengthen our influence in making the case for place.'

Neil Gibson, ADEPT President 2018/19

- ADEPT members serve almost 60% of the population of England – over 31.6 million people – in more than 13.3 million households.
- Each year, ADEPT members across England spend over £5.1bn managing highways and providing a range of services including transport, housing, environmental, regulatory, planning, development and culture.
- ADEPT members manage almost three-quarters of the total road length in England (over 140,000 miles) and spend over £1.5 billion a year on highways and transport services.
- 16 million tonnes of household waste is collected by ADEPT members annually, of which over 7.5 million tonnes is recycled or composted.

‘Colas welcomes the insight we gain, through our ADEPT membership, of national and local government social value and sustainability issues. Our active participation in discussions and seminars informs us as to how we can best work in collaboration to provide the services required by today’s society. It has given us a unique insight into how ADEPT’s approach can shape the communities we live and work in.’

David Craik, Executive Director, Colas
